

CRAIG FULLERTON –BIO

Craig Fullerton is considered an inspirational thought leader in integral education, an engaging storyteller, author, inspirational Coach, and international TED and keynote speaker, committed to sharing his research for innovation in education.

Craig has been working in International Education Leadership in International Schools across five continents including Norway, Australia and The Philippines for over 25 years. Additionally, Craig has vast experience as a professional musician and Conductor, executive and personal coach to people in both the education and corporate worlds

He is committed to empowering students and professionals to perform at peak levels for a vision-driven, transformative impact. By opening up challenging and transparent conversations, whether in an education or coaching environment he is able to lead people of all ages and vocations to uncover their motivational drivers, needs and values to create and sustain meaningful change and cultivate the leaders of tomorrow.

Ideas are based on a lifetime of research and insights on approaches to learning, coaching and mentoring, drawn from hands-on experience across multiple senior teaching, and leadership roles; personal and executive coaching.

Craig's approach is based on an integral model of learning that incorporates aspects of neuroscience, cognitive psychology, associative learning and Neuro Linguistic Programming.

Craig holds advanced degrees in Educational Leadership and Management; is a certified NLP Master Coach and Trainer, Global Leaders of the Future 360 Assessor and a Certified Executive Coach with Marshall Goldsmith Stakeholder Centered Coaching.

Craig continues to enjoy embarking on his own professional and personal development learning opportunities, sharing his knowledge and skills as a leader, coach; as an advocate for student leadership and a life-long journey with Martial Arts.

You can connect with Craig via craig@craigfullerton.com.au

website www.craigfullerton.com.au

